

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

P R E F A C E .

Five generations had passed away before any attempt was made to trace the family history and lineage. Traditions exist which are more or less reliable, but after two and one-third centuries, nothing can be absolutely known excepting what was recorded near the times when the events occurred. The records made at the time will greatly aid in furnishing information concerning those who long ago passed from earth, and to these records reference has been had for facts concerning at least four generations recorded in this book.

The records of Essex county and of the towns of Ipswich, Rowley, Georgetown and Methuen, all in Massachusetts, have been carefully searched, and all the information they furnish deemed worthy of preservation will be here found.

For the first fifty-five years, nearly all the family lived in Ipswich. For eighty-five years after that, most of the family lived in Rowley and Georgetown, while two families and their descendants lived many years in Methuen.

But very few left Essex county before the close of the war of the revolution. At that time the family had increased in numbers considerably and sought and found new homes in other parts of Massachusetts and in New Hampshire and Vermont, and twenty years later in Maine and Nova Scotia.

At the present time the family is greatly scattered, being found in at least five New England states, and in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, California and perhaps some other states. It is not known that any of the family ever made a permanent settlement in a slave state in which slavery existed, excepting in one instance. If any one of them has claimed to hold another human being as his chattel, it has not come to the knowledge of the writer.

Our early ancestors were men of character, standing and influence, industrious and frugal, willing and able to sustain themselves and rear their families for usefulness. The same characteristics have to a great extent marked their posterity. No family has made better citizens than the descendants of Moses Pengry. Trained as most of them have been to habits of industry, frugality and uprightness, descended from puritan ancestry, and embracing much of their strictness, they have been law abiding, and ready to contribute of their property and influence to promote the general welfare.

In only one instance has any one of the name been tried for felony, and in that case the respondent was honorably acquitted by a verdict of a jury of his country.

The law reports do not contain the name as a party litigant for nearly two centuries, and up to the present time it will be found that in most instances they have secured their rights without appealing to the courts to settle them.

They have decided opinions upon political questions of importance, and exercise the right of speech and of suffrage, but none of them have made politics their business nor held office except by the spontaneous call of the people.

Those who have lived to manhood or womanhood have generally become heads of families, and have contributed their share of the country's defenders.

In the French war, the war of the revolution, the second war with Great Britain and the war for sustaining the unity of the nation and the authority of the United States government, they furnished their share of those who took the tented field, and endured the hardships of war, and poured out their blood and gave up their lives for their country and nation. Before the war of the rebellion they entertained divers political views, but when the tug of war came they were all patriots, were all for sustaining the authority of the nation forcibly, if necessary. None of them rejoiced at rebel victories, or mourned for their defeat.

The knowledge the writer had of the family before commencing this work and the information obtained in preparing it, combined, lead him to a feeling of just pride in his ancestry and kinsfolk, and although the work may prove to him a pecuniary loss, he will be in some measure compensated by the pleasure of an acquaintance with the family.

When, about seven years ago, he entertained a purpose to collect the history of the family, he did not know of another person who was interested in it. He soon, however, found encouragement from others, which tended to cheer him while pursuing his inquiries under difficulties. Among the earliest who took an interest were Rev. Dr. John F. Pingry of Elizabeth, N. J., and Thomas P. Pingree, Esq., a prominent lawyer of Pittsfield, Mass. They have aided me greatly in obtaining the information which has enabled me to prepare and send out the work. My acknowledgements are also due to Miss Lucy W. Tenney of Rowley, Mass., Mrs. Sarah P. Peabody of Stratham, N. H., Mrs. Betsey Pingry of Hartland, Vt., Edmund P. Pingree and his daughter Lizzie A. Pingree of Denmark, Me., Bradbury C. A. Pingree of Norway, Me., Parkman Pingree of Parkman, Me., Rev. Andrew and Dr. David Pingree both of Pingree Grove, Ill., David Pingree a Salem, Mass., Luther F. Pingree of Portland, Me., Benjamin

B. Pingree of Rowley, Mass., Caroline P. Frost of Petersham, Mass., Hon. N. W. Hazen of Andover, Mass., Mrs. Rebecca Webster of Bridgewater, N. H., Nathan P. Dodge of Council Bluffs, Iowa, Wm. W. Pingree of Chicago, Ill., True Pingry of Omro, Wis., and a person (a lady, I think, who did not give her name) who furnished me a valuable record of the descendants of Daniel Pingree, and especially to Mrs. Mary A. Burnham of Ayer, Mass., who furnished me family records, and preserved and lent me ancient papers, without which I would not have commenced the work. After commencing my researches I was surprised to find what the name originally was. So far as I now recollect, the first knowledge I had of it was obtained by the autograph signature of the second Aaron to a deed made in 1713, a copy of which is inserted in this work, and afterwards I was informed by Thomas P. Pingree of Pittsfield, Mass., that in examining Essex county records at Salem, he found a record of Aaron Pengry's will. He afterwards furnished me a copy of the will in which was the name of Moses Pengry as a witness. From this copy and many other ancient papers I am led to think that persons bearing the name for the first two generations uniformly spelled it Pengry. The first departure from that orthography that has come to my knowledge, was in the case of my great-grandfather, Aaron, who added an "e" at the end making it Pengrye. I have no certain information that any other person of the name so spelled it. Since that time the spelling has been greatly diverse with a strong tendency for the last eighty or ninety years to end with double e. I have endeavored in the body of the work to spell each person's name as he spelled it himself, so far as I could ascertain. I have found at least one ancient name that I cannot classify. Wm. J. Pingree has furnished me from the New England Historical and Genealogical Register Vol. 7, page 79 or 359 the name of Wm. Pengry whose age was 22, in 1666. This is all I know of him. I think I have the names of the children of Moses Pengry, and therefore think he may have been a son of the first Aaron, and that he died before 1684 when Aaron made his will. If that were so, Aaron had a former wife (which is quite probable) of whom I have no account.

One who has had no experience in collecting and arranging family records, can have but little idea of the difficulties and labor of the task. Many letters remain unanswered, sometimes repeated solicitations have brought a reply, sometimes not. Frequently letters giving information have been illegible, or unintelligible. I have never known a genealogical record that had not many mistakes and I cannot expect this will be singular in that respect. Persons finding mistakes will confer a favor by giving information. Corrections may and should be preserved, so that in case of a future enlarged and improved edition, a more accurate and valuable work may obtained.

With this work, containing such records for two hundred and forty years as have been accessible, for a foundation a good work may hereafter be made.

I would have been pleased to have been furnished with many more biographical sketches. No doubt many might have been written which would be valuable. I have had personal acquaintance with very few of the family, and have not felt myself competent to furnish sketches of them. Nearly all contained in the work have been furnished me. The book I send out is principally statistical, containing names and dates so far as I have obtained them, and showing how each is related to the others. Perhaps future researches will discover the lost link in the family of the second and third Moses Pengrys.

Whether James Pingry of Lyme, N. H., and George Pingry of Bennington, Vt., were sons or grandsons of Moses of the third generation, and where the family were from 1699 to 1764 may be made to appear hereafter.

It is quite probable that the third Moses, or his son or sons, lived for a time in Tolland, Conn., but the town records do not show it.

In this work I have undertaken only to look up and arrange the family in America. The origin of Aaron and Moses would be an interesting study, and efforts in that direction have been put forth, thus far with no satisfactory result.

It is generally understood in the family that they came from England to Ipswich, Mass., probably from near London. The fact that Moses and Aaron and the sons of Moses allied themselves by marriage with good families, and that Moses took a leading position in the civil government and in the church tends to show that they were regarded not as foreigners, but as citizens.

After considerable investigation it is ascertained there has been within forty years in England one man named Pingree and one named Pengree. Whether any of the name were left there after the immigration of Aaron and Moses is uncertain. The name most like it is the French name Pingré. That name has existed in France for some four or five centuries, perhaps longer. It is said to have originated at Amiens. There have been noblemen of the name as far back as it has been traced. One person of the name, Alexandre Gui Pingré, was distinguished as an astronomer. He is said to have been born at Paris in 1711, and died 1796. A Count of the name has been travelling in America the present year, 1881.

Rev. Mr. Wood of Scituate, Mass., has become interested in looking up the origin of the family, desiring if possible, to show that the American family are descended from the French family. So far he has not succeeded, but is hopeful that he may do so, or at least ascertain the origin of the Pingree family.

However flattering it might be to us to show our descent from a noble family, we must be content at present with such esteem as we deserve on account of what we now are.

I invited information upon the subject of religious and political preferences, and have obtained it in a few cases. My information upon that subject has been so limited that I have not to any great extent introduced it into the book.

Some have desired I should delay publishing the book hoping to obtain more full information, especially as to our transatlantic ancestors and kindred. Others have been earnest for its speedy publication. Some who earnestly desired to see the book have left the world without seeing it.

Had I the prospect of many years of life and ability to prosecute the work it might make a difference with me, but having arrived at an age nearer four score years than three score and ten I am admonished that what I do must be done quickly.

EXPLANATIONS.

The small raised figures at the end of a name, mark the generation to which the name belongs. The sign + points to a continuation of the family to be found in its proper place in the book. The figures in parentheses are consecutive members to which reference is had in the body of the work and in the indexes. The Roman numerals show the number of persons in the family, mostly in the order of birth, but not always. A dash (—) signifies something to be supplied; b. stands for born; m. stands for married; d. stands for died or daughter.

THE PENGRY FAMILY.

FIRST GENERATION.

(1) AARON PENGRY

Was in Ipswich, Mass. as early as April 1641, as appears by the record of a deed from Barnabas Horton to Moses Pengry, dated the 12th day of the first month, 1641, to which Aaron was a witness. In 1648, he subscribed 3^s towards Major Denison's salary. Major Daniel Denison was deputy to the General Court from Ipswich that year. In 1654, Aaron Pengry owned a house lot near John Brewer, Mark Quilter and others. This was probably in the north or northwest part of Ipswich, as Aug. 10, 1662, he bought of John and Sarah Gage of Rowley, some marsh land near said Quilter's which is said to be in the north part of Ipswich; and May 31, 1671, Aaron Pengry husbandman, bought of Thomas and Johanna a dwelling house and 1½ acre at the northwest part of Ipswich. The 13th day, 7th month 1673, Aaron Pengry bought land of James Shute near Samuel Bishop, Philip Fowler and Robert Lord.

+ (2) MOSES PENGRY. The earliest information obtained in relation to Moses Pengry is contained in a deed to him of real estate, dated the twelfth day of the first month 1641.

The early settlers of New England commenced the year March 25th, until 1760, so that the date of the deed would be by subsequent reckoning until 1752, April 5, or if we carry the calendar forward eleven days for new style April 16th. It is probable that Moses and Aaron Pengry were both of Ipswich as early as 1640, perhaps a few years earlier.

Moses m. Abigail d. of Robert Clement, who is said by Savage to have come from London to Haverhill, Mass., as early as 1642, bringing many children with him, no less than nine of whom are named in his will. Mr. Clement was representative of the town of Haverhill in the General Court of Mass. from 1647 to 1653, seven years.

In his will he names Moses Pingree husband of his daughter Abigail. Ipswich records show that in 1641, Moses Pengry was one of the list of commoners. In 1648, he was paid 4 shillings for killing a fox. The same year he subscribed three shillings toward Major Denison's salary. In 1650 Moses Pengry received a grant of land 40 acres beyond Mr. Hubbard's farm near to Wenham line. In 1653, Moses Pengry paid 6s for pasturing two cows on the north side of the river. In 1654 he was one of the selectmen. In 1656 Dea. Pengry is assessed by the selectmen 4 pounds 5s as a spinner. In 1659 Moses Pengry has liberty to fell two white oaks. In Felt's history of Ipswich it is represented on the 12th page that the earliest date in which Moses Pingrey's name appears on the records is 1642 and that of Aaron in 1648, but this is evidently a mistake.

On page 98 of Felt's History of Ipswich is the following:

"Salt works 1652," "Granted to Moses Pengry a parcel of land by the ware house below Obadiah Wood's fence, to set up his salt pans and works and fence in his woods; also liberty to fell wood out of the swamp near the town for his use."

On page 170 of the same book, "1696 Jan. 2, Moses Pengry died aged 86. His wife Lydia died January 16th, 1676. He was of Ipswich in 1642. Set up salt-works here in 1652, was selectman and often in town business, was Deputy to the General Court in 1665, and was deacon in the first church. He lived long and usefully on earth as one preparing for a heritage in heaven."

From the Haverhill, Mass. Gazette, Oct. 18, 1871.

There died at Georgetown the 30th ult. a remarkable person, who seemed to come down from a former generation, and that beyond the last. On the same day of the year when she entered this life,

Mrs. Lydia, widow of Nathan Phillips, departed from it, at the advanced age of ninety-seven years. Her maiden name was Pingry. She was grandmother of Gen. Grenville M. Dodge, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, who is among the most distinguished citizens of the great West.

She was remarkable for the clearness of her understanding, for the decision of character without the possession of which any other virtue and attainment may be in vain.

Many instances are still remembered, in which she displayed these traits. There is one which for its connection with the public interest, and for the instructive example and the lesson which it conveys, should not be forgotten. In the early stages of the Temperance Reformation, after she had signed her own name, and those of her children of a sufficient age to understand the transaction had done the same, the over-zealous advocate, ambitious for the apparent success of the cause, and to swell the catalogue of those whom his labors had secured to it, pressed that the names should be added of those younger still. But she at once refused her consent, resisted his solicitation, and would not permit it to be done, saying that these names carried with them the false pretense that assent had been given by persons who for the want of suitable intelligence could not give it properly and effectually, and who could afford no real support.

Who can say how much good was thus done by keeping the cause pure, and by her refusal to sacrifice in it what alone gives value to any cause, truth? It is certain she rendered to it the highest possible service. The act required for its performance the presence of mind, clearness of discernment and promptitude, which in the greatest affairs makes of men heroes. And it is from the exhibition of traits like this in the present organization of society, oftener than from the man, that the virtues of the people, if they are continued, must be derived.

The lives and virtues of her own children illustrate the value of an education from such a source as her training and example afforded.

She made an early profession of her faith in Christianity, and through her long life abstained from what its precepts and spirit forbid, and did the deeds which it enjoins, while she enjoyed the comforts and was adorned by the graces which even here are shared by the humblest followers of the Saviour.

Nathan and Lydia Pingry Phillips had children as follows:

1. ELIZABETH, b. —— 1800; m. —— Scott; had two children. Her husband and children are dead. She lives at North Beverly, Mass.
2. JULIA T.; b. at Rowley, Mass., Jan. 23, 1802; m. Sylvanus Dodge Nov. 22, 1827; immediately after marriage removed to Danvers, Mass, where Mr. Dodge was for a time engaged in the provision business. He was appointed Post Master of that town in 1844, which office he held until he removed Grenville M. Dodge, has distinguished himself as a civil engineer, and as an officer in the war of the Rebellion. He entered the Military University at Norwich, Vt., in 1847, and completed his course of education under Capt. Partridge. In 1851 he removed to Illinois and participated in the construction of the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad. In 1853 he was appointed assistant engineer of the Mississippi & Missouri Railroad in Iowa, now called Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad. In 1855, he was engaged in opening a farm with his father and brother in Nebraska. Driven from that by the Indians he settled in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and for several years engaged in engineering, banking and real estate business. He was active and influential in advancing the interests of that city.

At the breaking out of the Rebellion he was sent by the Governor of Iowa to Washington to arrange for the arming and equipment of the Iowa troops. He returned and raised the fourth Iowa Infantry Regiment, of which he was commissioned as Colonel, and also raised the second Iowa Battery, reporting with both to Gen. Fremont at St. Louis, and joined the army of the Southwest. He bore a prominent part in the famous battle of Pea Ridge, where the rebel power was broken in Missouri and North Arkansas. He had three horses shot under him and was severely wounded, and for his gallantry was made Brigadier General at the request of Major General Halleck.

After recovering from his wounds he was assigned to the command of the district of Columbus, Kentucky.

In 1862, immediately after the battle of Corinth, he was appointed to command the second division of the army of the Tennessee in the district organized and commanded by Gen. Grant.

Gen. Dodge was soon afterwards assigned to the command of the district of Corinth.

In the spring of 1863 his men were occupied in driving back the forces of Gens. Forrest and Roddy and other rebels, and harassing the rear of Gen. Bragg's army. He also organized and equipped large numbers of loyal white Alabamians and colored troops.— On July 5, 1863, he was appointed to command the left wing of the 16th Army Corps, and joined Gen. Sherman in his march to Chattanooga, and wintered with his men on the line of the Nashville & Decatur railroad. In the spring of 1864 he was entrusted with the advance of the Army of the Tennessee in the Atlanta campaign. For his brave and faithful services in this campaign he was made Major General by the government at Washington. When the confederates under Gen. Hood made the fierce attack under which Gen. McPherson fell mortally wounded, Gen. Dodge's corps bore the brunt of the encounter, and through his skill and intrepidity, rescued the army of the Tennessee, and turned the tide of battle, capturing 8 flags and a very large number of prisoners. The corps was in all the battles in the march to Atlanta and lost more in proportion to its size in killed and wounded than any one of that army.

During the siege of Atlanta Gen. Dodge was again wounded, receiving a gun shot in the forehead while he was in a rifle pit on the skirmish line superintending an advance; this was on the 19th of Aug. 1864. As soon as he was again fit for duty, he reported and was assigned by President Lincoln to the Department of Missouri, where he relieved Gen. Rosecranz. The National troops in Missouri had become quite demoralized, and the State overrun by guerillas. Gen. Dodge brought order out of anarchy. At the same time Kansas and Utah were merged into his command, adding greatly to his cares and responsibilities. He received the surrender of 4000 of Gen. Kirby Smith's army in Arkansas and of Jeff Thompson with 8000 in Missouri.

The war being closed, Gen. Dodge's command was changed to include the Indian Country, embracing Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Western Dakotah, Montana and Utah.

In June 1866 he was at his own request relieved from further military duty. His resignation having been accepted, he was appointed chief engineer of the Union Pacific Railroad.

For a long time he had given much attention to the contemplated enterprise, making important surveys and taking counsel of President Lincoln and other leading men of the nation. He was very active and influential in laying out the route and forwarding the work. While away from home in July, 1866, he was nominated for Congress by the Republicans of Western Iowa and elected over a popular competitor by 5000 majority. In the House of Representatives on the Committee on Military Affairs he gave special attention to the re-organization of the army and defence of the border against Indians. He declined a renomination, and returned to the plains and mountains to push on the Pacific Railroad, supervising its relations with the government, seeing the law was strictly adhered to, and that the work was well done. After the completion of the Union Pacific Railroad in 1868, he became chief engineer of the Southern Pacific, now Texas & Pacific Railroad, having charge of the survey and construction. Since then he has been engaged in the management of the Union Pacific and other Western Railroads, with his home in Council Bluffs, but spending most of his time in New York.

Nathan T. Dodge, the younger brother, went to Nebraska with his parents in 1855, and for one year endured the hardships of frontier life. In 1856 he went to Council Bluffs, where he has since resided, engaged in Banking and Real Estate business, in the enjoyment of health and prosperity, and using his influence, talents and property in promoting the interests of the religious, educational and benevolent institutions of the State.

Obituary Notice, written by Mrs. N. W. Hazen of Andover, Mass.

Died at Wilmot, N. H., June 19, 1849, Mrs. Molly Cass, aged 85. She was a native of that part of Rowley, now Georgetown, Mass. Her maiden name was Pingree. She was aunt to the Messrs.

D. & T. P. Pingree of Salem, Mass., and bore, by marriage, the same relation to Gen. Lewis Cass of Michigan.

More than sixty years since, upon her marriage she removed to the vicinity of the place where she died, which was then far into the midst of a dense, wide and nearly unbroken wilderness. Here her husband had raised his log house, and made his clearing in the forest. She reared a large family of children, and has left numerous descendants. She lived to see the mountain region of Kearsarge, which she entered a wilderness, by a footpath and on horseback, a populous district, and the steamcar rushing across its valleys and the bases of its hills.

The energy and perseverance of her character suited her to be the companion of a "first settler." She never resigned her habits of active industry, but chose to devote the latest days of her life to useful and often painful toil. She possessed a mind of uncommon activity and vigor. Her memory was unimpaired, and she retained an extensive knowledge of the genealogies of the ancient families in the northern part of Essex County. She was always cheerful, and in all her trials she was supported by the faith and hopes of Christianity. In every scene she maintained a dignity and composure fitted to the Christian profession which many years since she adopted and ever adorned.

He lived the early part of his life at Littleton, sold there and purchased a farm in Groton, not far from his Littleton farm. The place where he last lived is called Pingryville for him. He d. Nov. 1, 1860.

The following obituary notice of his first wife appeared in the Watchman and Reflector, July 1856:

"Died in South Groton, 28th ult., Mrs. Eunice, wife of Dea. John Pingry, 50, an highly esteemed member of the Baptist church. So Christlike in heart, in life and in death, as to leave no doubt but she was a Christian, and has gone to heaven."

In the same paper, Nov. 1860 : "Died in South Groton, on Thursday, Nov. 1, Dea. John Pingry, 61. A correspondent writing us respecting this devoted servant of God, says: "He was a man of energy and liberality." Some remarks that have come to my ears since his death show something of the man. A little girl from his neighborhood says, "I cannot go to meeting any more, for I shall not have Dea. Pingry to carry me." A sister of the church and neighbor of the Deacon's said, "I can't stop now to communion, for there is no Deacon Pingry to carry me home." Her husband is not a member of the church. Another sister, a neighbor too, and much tried for years with an intemperate husband, said: "We lost our nursing mother when sister Pingry died, and now we have lost our nursing father." A brother of the same neighborhood, said: "We shall miss him; wicked men were afraid of him." Another neighbor at Pingryville said: "There were none of us who did not sometimes need to go to him for a word of counsel." He was a friend to the poor, a terror to evil doers. The good honored him; the bad cursed him. He was at one time the chief support of the Baptist cause in this village. To the last he was liberal in his contributions. In religious meetings he always bore an acceptable part. He anticipated death, and looked for a home above. This is his record. What better could a man have? "The good honored him."

- (224) I. DAVID.⁶

HON. DAVID PINGREE.

The name of one is now in order whose life and character merit, and will probably receive elsewhere a more full relation than can be given here.

DAVID PINGREE, son of Asa Pingree and Annar Perkins his wife, was born Dec. 31, 1795, on the farm known as the "Pingree Place," situated in that part of Rowley since incorporated Georgetown. He was carried to Maine when his father removed thither with his family. Mr. Pingree was among the first settlers of the now popular and flourishing town of Bridgton. He built a saw and a grist mill before clearing away the forest for a farm.

The early employment of David was in the care of the mills. Soon as he became bodily able the whole charge was devolved upon him. His father was much from home. His interest in his mills did not suffer from his absence. The conduct of his son so engaged the confidence of the customers that it was talked of among them. Young as he was, he had a clear and established reputation for honesty and exactness. He had then never been taught arithmetic; yet by some process of his own he measured and computed correctly the quantity and value of the lumber which he often had occasion to deliver. Thus here were developed, and perhaps out of the necessities of his condition were implanted the qualities of mind and character which distinguished him in the later periods of his life.

At the age of eighteen years he returned with his father's family to Rowley. His maternal uncle, Thomas Perkins* of Topsfield, had secured the title to the "Pingree Place." The family of Asa Pingree were given the possession of it, with the stock and implements proper to a farm.

*The connection of this gentleman with the family name whose records are here traced is so important that some account of him seems due. He was born in Topsfield, Mass., on the farm where he made his last residence. He went to sea as a common sailor, was captured in the war of the Revolution, and was carried prisoner to the West Indies. He was permitted to labor, and when released and leaving the port where he had been detained, his earnings, in the shape of a hogshead of sugar, when being raised from the lighter to the vessel in which it was to be shipped, fell between the lighter and vessel into the ocean. Not discouraged, he began a new career of industry and enterprise, in which he amassed great riches. The loss of health compelled him to retire from business. He died a bachelor. David Pingree had inscribed on marble this delineation of his character:

The whole was put into the charge of David, whose management of the property was closely inspected by his beneficent relative.

The conduct of the farm was satisfactory, but it did not afford the only test to which the capacity and disposition of David were subjected. He was furnished with money for the business of a drover, and was sent to Maine for the purchase of cattle to be driven to the Boston market. At its close the business was judged to be well done, and satisfactory accounts of it were rendered.

"The Pingree Place" had many claims upon the affections of David Pingree.

It was first occupied as a farm by his ancestors. All the buildings upon it were erected by them. They had never been in any other occupancy.

When the grandfather of David died upon it, Capt. Perkins bought it for the use of David's parents and their family. It was thus associated in the tenderest manner with the memories of their great benefactor. It had already a venerable connection with the family name. As soon as David had the ability he permitted no reasonable opportunity for adding adjoining territory to pass unimproved. Some such purchases were made when he was pressed for money for other purposes. At the time of his death it embraced over 700 acres, a large portion of which was woodland. The soil of the farm was not naturally fertile; the buildings only such as the place necessarily required. It has now passed out of the family name into other hands, having been purchased for that purpose by parties who have since cut off the wood and timber in which its chief value consisted.

After the farm, its cares and labors, came the school. He entered Atkinson Academy in 1818. His teacher, Mr. Vose, was much distinguished in his profession. He removed to the charge of the Academy at Hampton, N. H., whither Mr. Pingree accompanied him. Such was the modesty and propriety of the demeanor of his pupil that the low grade of his studies at his advanced age did not impair respect for him.

In Memory of
THOMAS PERKINS, Esq.,
An eminent Merchant.
His Industry, Temperance and Enterprise
Raised him from Poverty to immense Wealth,
Which he enjoyed without Pride
Or Ostentation, and dispensed with Justice
And Benevolence. He was diligent and Faithful in Business, pure in his Life and Conversation; of a sound and vigorous Mind;
And of an Integrity and Fortitude which Neither Prosperity nor Adversity could Shake or Corrupt.
He was an affectionate Son, and a kind Relative.
He was a Christian, above sectarian Prejudice;
And a man above Fear and without Reproach.
He was born in Topfield,
April 2, 1758, and
Died Nov. 24, 1830.

Out of his attendance at school in Atkinson arose an event which gave a color to the whole after life of Mr. Pingree.

Having passed without failure all the tests to which his faithful monitor thought it requisite to subject him, he had now arrived at the ultimate end proposed by them, his entrance into mercantile life at Salem. He began in the counting-room of Michael Shepard, Esq., himself an eminent merchant, and confidential agent of Thomas Perkins in the management of his estate.

The commerce of Salem for many years held a distinguished place among the ports of the country. Its merchants opened and had long carried on nearly the whole trade between the United States and the East Indies. These and other similar enterprises had given them wealth and inspired them with a spirit of adventure. Their voyages were not mere competitions in some beaten track, but often extended to new and hitherto unvisited ports, and to harbors whose names were written for the first time in the owner's orders to the captain of the vessel. The generation of merchants then in activity was composed mainly of those who had grown old in such enquiries and pursuits. Their genius for discovery had been aroused in their youth; it had stimulated their earliest aspirations, and guided and influenced their whole lives. They were full of the knowledge gained from masters and supercargoes, among whom it was a part of duty to secure such information.

This youth from the country was brought into rivalry with persons so qualified and accomplished in commercial pursuits. How long will he sustain himself? He knows not how to plan a voyage, or how to make selections to suit the business of any port, or what to seek or expect as a return cargo.

He learned from Mr. Shepard the modes and forms of business and trade. He was at the same time engaged in the sale, on commission, of flour, grain and provisions on account of southern dealers. In this time he had an interest in two small vessels trading between South America and Salem. His position brought him into a practical acquaintance with trade and the elements of commerce. Intercourse with merchants furnished him with their ideas, their judgments, and modes of thinking and reasoning.—How he availed himself of these advantages is shown when the increase of his means enabled him to enter upon his real commercial career.

The success of David Pingree in the line of life for which he had been so many years silently but constantly preparing him, became the absorbing interest of Capt. Perkins. When his patronage of his nephew was avowed, he removed from Topsfield to Salem for observation and counsel. He died, as already stated, in 1830. By his will, after providing for other relatives, he made David residuary legatee, and thus heir to about one-half of the whole estate. With such resources at his command, Mr. Pingree proceeded to enlarge his commercial operations. The space which can here be afforded does not admit of detail; a single instance must suffice.

The latest geographical authorities of the coast north of Zanzibar in 1830 were three centuries old. So late as 1822 to 1826 two ships of the British navy were sent by the government on voyages of discovery to the eastern coast of Africa. In 1835 two vessels of the same navy, the Lever and the Barracouta, performed voyages of discovery to Africa and Arabia.

An early adventure by Mr. Pingree was the loading and despatch of a vessel to Zanzibar. But few American vessels had previously visited that port. The reigning Sultan claimed dominion over 3000 miles of sea coast. He was an enlightened ruler. His reign will form an era in the civilization of his country. The Sultan saw at once the benefit that would result to himself from encouraging foreign commerce. Upon the opening of trade between the two nations, he adopted a tariff favoring Americans. He signaled his regard for Mr. Pingree by sending to him the gift of two Arabian horses in charge of two of his subjects.

In some of the voyages made to the country portions of the return cargo were reshipped to England. It was stated in the Edinburgh Review that the merchants of London did not know what was the place of their produce, and could not account for their being found in American bottoms.

Among the importations of these voyages were large quantities of ivory. This was in part sold to a manufacturer, in Connecticut, of articles made of this material, on such terms as greatly enlarged the profits to which they had been accustomed. These customers gratefully acknowledged their obligations to the liberality of Mr. Pingree by the gift of a heavy ivory cane made from a single tooth, bearing an inscription highly honorable to him.

His commercial operations at different times embraced voyages and shipments to various ports in the West Indies; in South America, to Cayenne, Rio Grande, Montevideo, and other ports; on the west coast of Africa, to the Cape de Verde Islands, Goree, Sierra Leone and points further south; on the east coast of Africa, to Madagascar and Zanzibar; to the Arabian ports, Aden and Muscat; to Canton in China, from which place he made large importations of tea in return for Mexican silver coin; to Batavia, Bombay, Manila, and other East Indian ports.

He owned at one time between four and five thousand tons of shipping.

There is no doubt that the study of orders under which his vessels sailed would furnish interesting materials towards a history of American commerce. When he entered upon his career he resolved to retire from it when he became fifty years old.— When he carried this resolution into effect it excited the regret of all classes, and especially of the mercantile community.

Capt. Perkins held to the old time prejudice against banks.

Hence little of his wealth was invested in their shares. Mr. Pingree early discovered the many advantages arising from having the control of banking facilities. In this view he proposed a new bank in Salem. This led to the establishment of the "Naumkeag Bank," incorporated in 1832, with a capital of $200,000, increased in 1836 to $500,000. He was its president during his life. This corporation has always been prosperous, and has hitherto enjoyed the full confidence of the public. It was almost a necessity to its founder. The new avenues of trade, and its new subjects which he introduced, brought fresh applicants for credit, to some of whom loans in some form were indispensable, and when obtained operated as an encouragement, and led to providing the means of repayment. The bank was an aid to all these parties. It promoted equally domestic trade and foreign commerce.

For another preserver of its population and wealth, and a stimulus to its industry, Salem is mainly indebted to Mr. Pingree in his lead and labors in the establishment of the Naumkeag factory. He treated the undertaking to build this mill as if it was his own individual enterprise, and all others treated it in the same manner. Its entire direction was with him. Its completeness, its adaptation and its thoroughness were all secured by his oversight. Its details, numerous as they were, and the sum of the whole of them, were suited to his capacity. His attention could contain and his judgment guide every part of the construction. The whole of the vast structure, and all its contents and their operation were clearly in his mind long before they were combined in the edifice. The confidence felt in his ability prevented controversy or obstruction, and secured all needed capital. He began and ended, its President. It is no injustice to any one to say that, successful as it was, his control led to its prosperity; yet it was all new work to him. He came to Salem an advocate for free trade. He knew nothing of cotton or woolen factories. His learning and his practice in them were the same operation.

The early recollections of Mr. Pingree led him at all times to give some attention to the timber lands of Maine. These had been for some years the subject of ignorant and therefore of rash speculations, which had now ceased. Their titles were left to repose in the hands where they happened to be held. They were no longer the subject of general inquiry. There were sellers, but few buyers. Perhaps it would be safe to say these had wholly disappeared. There were many sellers from necessity; they were such as had bought merely to sell, and had not the means to enable them to hold. The titles had become intricate and complicated. The record sometimes even described premises which had no existence. Still there was embraced here a great and substantial value; but it was to be eliminated out of chaos.

Here was a field for the exercise of mind, of skill and patience, as well as of great caution. Necessity for every kind of enquiry was presented. As already suggested, it was first to be made certain that any such premises existed. Then to distinguish between such as were valuable and such as had none or very small value. Then to settle the title. His first purchase was made in 1841, and in succeeding years he continued to buy largely. Meanwhile he was constantly reducing his shipping interests, until in the year 1848 he relinquished that business entirely. If his retirement from commercial pursuits was intended to relieve him from the cares of business, it was far from bringing about the desired result.

The proper management of the timber lands which he had obtained was no easy matter. Left to themselves they would have been subject to the depredations of others, while yielding no return to their owner. Surveys had to be made; lumbering operations encouraged and provided for; the internal waters of the State improved for the floating of logs; booming privileges secured for holding the logs, and mills for sawing them. In many instances it became necessary to obtain legislative authority to act. In all these matters Mr. Pingree exhibited his usual energy and sagacity.

He also became interested in iron-mining and other enterprises, the management and responsibility of which devolved upon him to a greater extent than he could have anticipated.

But all these cares would have been easily borne by him had he not become involved in financial difficulties, to extricate himself from which required the long continued exertion of all the talents he possessed, and filled the last fifteen years of his life with labor, care and anxiety.

He had bought largely of timber lands for permanent investment. Through still further additions to them he sought a release from his difficulties. At the time of his decease his estate was heavily burdened with debt; nevertheless, he had succeeded in rescuing it from many of the complications in which it had become involved.

He was chosen Presidential elector in 1849. He was elected mayor of Salem in 1851. He was President of the Essex Railroad, and also of the Salem and Danvers Aqueduct.

Salem has had many public spirited, and for its numbers not a few great men. It would not be easy to point to the name of one of whom it could be proved that the obligations of the city are greater to him than they are to David Pingree.

He spent no nights or days in political pursuits, but he was a steady supporter of the Union and Constitution. He was never wanting in the performance of duty such as in his place it belonged to a good citizen to render.

He acquired the rare faculty of concentrating his thoughts on a subject, and holding them there at his will. He thought much, deeply and earnestly. He did not allow his reason to be disturbed by fancies, by imagination, passion or by any form of falsehood. He subjected all his powers to plain fact and pure reason; not to such reasons as might first present themselves, but to such as would come when often summoned from the very bottom of the well of truth, and could bear every test of judgment.

Thus, though the most modest of the members, he was certain to become the leader in every enterprise which he joined. A secondary position was never assigned to him.

He was pre-eminently a man of business, a merchant of integrity, broad views and untiring industry. Idleness and idle amusements had no attractions for him. Slighting no duty himself, he expected and required of those in his employ a zealous and faithful performance of their work. He never measured moral worth by material prosperity; but treated all with the respect to which their characters entitled them. He never neglected his duties to others, or to the corporations over which he presided through all his varying fortunes.

He passed through many trials and was involved in conflicting interests; in them his integrity was always vindicated. To others struggling in business he not unfrequently rendered assistance, and for them assumed responsibilities, sometimes to the detriment of his own interests; hence arose misfortunes which he would not otherwise have experienced.

In person he was well formed and proportioned, full six feet in height, with a finely shaped head, and a face of singular manly beauty. In the latter part of his life he contracted a stoop of his shoulders and a demeanor of apparent unconsciousness, not unusual in persons often subjected to severe mental exertion. His manner was so mild that it bore the air of meekness. He was modest and grave, but no one more enjoyed humor or cheerful conversation.

He died at his home in Salem, March 31, 1863, aged 67 years, 3 months.

David Pingree m. Ann Maria Kimball, b. at Plaistow, N. H., April 9, 1804; m. Dec. 24, 1824.

The following list of voyages made by Mr. Pingree's vessels, although not complete, will suffice to show the extent of his commercial ventures. In many instances the vessels made voyages to various ports before returning homewards; in such cases, only one point of destination is here given.

- (225) II. ANNAR,⁶ b. at Rowley, June 30, 1797; d. unmarried.
- (226) III. MARY,⁶ b. at Rowley, March 13, 1801; m. Hon. Nathan Wood Hazen, a lawyer of Andover, Mass., Oct. 21, 1830; d. March 23, 1880.

Mary, daughter of Asa Pingree and Annar Perkins, was born March 13, 1801; married to Nathan W. Hazen, Oct. 1830. There was born alive no child of the marriage. She early became a member of the church in Rowley of which Rev. Isaac Braman was pastor.

In this record of the name of Pingree it is pleasing to state that no one held it in higher respect, or more jealously guarded its honor. Of the family of her father she formed the common bond. She was the first to make sacrifices; the last to present claims. Indeed the happiness she sought was that reflected from the contemplation of what she conferred upon others. In many traits of character, she was like her brother, David Pingree. In all she was an honor and an ornament to her connexions. Her life was guided by the virtues and adorned by the graces which form the image of the Christian lady.

(227) IV. HON. THOMAS PERKINS' PINGREE, for many years a well known and highly respected merchant of Salem, Essex County, Massachusetts, was born in New Rowley, now Georgetown, July 24, 1803, at the Hazen farm, so called, and died December 29, 1864, at Wenham in the same county.

His father was Asa Pingree, a farmer, who married Annar Perkins, March 17, 1795; (daughter of Moses Perkins and Annar his wife, whose maiden name was Cummings) she was born May 31, 1771, and died June 9, 1853. With the New England custom to combine, for a better support, some handicraftsman's trade with farming, shoe making was carried on by him with the farm at New Rowley until his removal to Bridgton in Maine; where he built a saw and grist mill, conducting them successfully for several years until his return to New Rowley, where he resided till his death, April 24, 1834; his wife, who survived him, was a woman of more than ordinary character, possessed of very keen perceptions, great firmness and decision, with many of the family characteristics that marked her brother, Thomas Perkins, as one of Salem's most distinguished and successful merchants.

Their children were—

David, Annar, Mary, Thomas Perkins, Asa.

Thomas Perkins Pingree, besides the educational advantages of farmers' boys, was placed for study with the Rev. Isaac Braman of New Rowley, (the father of Rev. Milton P. Braman of Danvers,) and after that was at North Andover Academy two years, and then at Hampton Academy in New Hampshire.

In 1819 he entered the counting-room of Hon. Michael Shepard in Salem, (who had been the confidential clerk and friend of his uncle, Thomas Perkins, and one of the trustees of his will at his death,) it is probable that the high character and business sagacity of Mr. Shepard, his great amiability and charitable and religious views had much influence in shaping and developing his future;—here he remained till 1826, when he entered into mercantile business for himself at Union Wharf in Salem, receiving a legacy at the death of his uncle Thomas Perkins of forty thousand dollars.

He married Abigail Garland of Danvers, July 17, 1828, who was born June 17, 1802. She was the daughter of Capt. Nath'l Garland and Lydia Jacobs his wife. Capt. Garland with his family within a few years thereafter removed to Baltimore, where he entered into business as a commission merchant, continuing therein, highly esteemed and moderately successful, till his death.

Mr. Pingree entered actively into commercial business, and for a long series of years stood in the front ranks of the mercantile community of Salem. He was among the first to introduce the large trade in rubber with South America, and prosecuted the business with great energy and success, being perhaps the largest importer of rubber for many years into this country. For several years he was President of the Asiatic Bank in Salem, and one of the most efficient officers of the Essex Insurance Company; later in life he was largely interested in the making of charcoal iron by the Briggs Iron Co., at Lanesborough in Berkshire county, Mass.

During his mercantile career his vessels visited all quarters of the globe, and at the time of the gold discovery in California, the brig Hannah, owned by himself and another, being on that coast, a letter from the captain, (Henry Cheever,) giving the first information thereof, and a wonderfully truthful account and estimate of its vastness and the field it opened, was received, and the facts made known to, at the time, an incredulous public. In his business he was distinguished for his enterprise and energy, and his firmness in the prosecution of a purpose was of the most determined character; he was governed by the highest principles of honor and integrity, and noted for his sympathy with and charity for those overtaken by reverses in business; every one having business relations with him was his friend; his benevolence was of the most generous character; liberal to all, he took more thought for the interests of others than for his own, and attracted to him all within the reach of his influence with an indissoluble affection.

Though an energetic business man, he was an ardent friend of country life and out of door exercises; he became quite attached to hunting, and for many years keenly enjoyed fox hunting, having at times twenty or more fox hounds, and always making it enjoyable, not only for himself, but for his many friends. His love of good horses was proverbial; never permitting it to degenerate into racing, or being an attendant thereat, he was yet a keen lover of a good horse, and the owner of many. For the last twenty years of his life he spent his summers at Wenham, about seven miles from Salem, where he had a beautiful farm which he greatly enjoyed, to which at the close of his life he retired, and where he died.

His domestic life was pure and simple, being a strict and rigid disciplinarian, rather austere in his demeanor than otherwise, but very attentive and considerate of the desires and happiness of those about him, with a generous liberality ministering to every want approved. Yet he perhaps made the mistake of being too much feared in his own family; possessing, as he did, so much that was tender, sympathetic and generous in his nature, it was surprising that even the rigid rule of his day should have produced so close an adherent.

He at different times represented Salem in the House of Representatives, and the County in the Senate of the State, being a member of the House in 1833 and in 1850, and of the Senate in 1854. In politics a Whig, yet never a politician.

The Boston Courier of Jan. 2, 1865, contained the following obituary notice of him. Published in the mercantile metropolis of New England, it was no doubt a just tribute to his memory:

"We regret to record the decease of Hon. Thomas P. Pingree, who died at Wenham on Thursday last, at the age of sixty-one. For a long series of years he stood in the front ranks of the mercantile community of Salem. He was distinguished for his determination, energy and enterprise, and was among the first to open the trade in rubber with Para, which he continued till within a few years of his death. In his business he was governed by the highest principles of honor and integrity, and noted for his sympathy with, and charity for, those whom misfortune overtook in their business. It can be said of him, with truth, that every one with whom he had business intercourse was his friend. He was for many years President of the Asiatic Bank in Salem, and one of the most efficient officers of the Essex Insurance Company. He at different times represented Salem in the House of Representatives, and the County in the Senate of the State. In his private relations, and within the circle of his immediate friends, his noble traits of character shone prominent. Generous and confiding to a fault, he attracted to him all within the reach of his influence with an indissoluble affection. There are few men in the community whose loss will be more deeply and sincerely mourned."

(228) V. Asa,^{*} a younger brother of David and Thomas P., was born in Bridgton, Maine, Feb. 25, 1807.

He was educated for a mercantile life, and joined David in Salem for the purpose of entering upon it. Upon trial, he did not find it adapted to his inclinations. In the meantime Capt. Perkins had resumed his residence on his farm in Topsfield, where in his increasing infirmities he needed the aid and constant society of a friend. At his request he took his abode with him until his death. After the decease of his uncle he fixed his residence upon the farm, and became that most enviable of all characters, a contented and independent farmer. He passed his life between books and agriculture, serving his family, dispensing sound opinions, doing charitable offices, and contributing in many ways to the support and improvement of society. He declined town offices; he was chosen to the State Senate in 1843.

He married Mary Catharine, daughter of Col. John Kilborn of Bridgton, Me. They had no issue. He died June 28, 1869.

He was a person of quick perception, of fortitude, and of great kindness. His conduct towards his brother, David, in his vicissitudes, was a remarkable instance of fraternal affection. In his cause he put his whole property in risk, and for years often daily rode to Salem to consult with, and to aid him. He was single in his purposes, and, like his brothers, clear and decided in his judgment. His will was strong; he followed its dictates, regarding in his course only truth and justice. Yet no cloud rests upon his memory. There are few of the departed of whose memory so many kind words have been said by his contemporaries.

(244) I. KEZIA,¹ b. in Hopkinton, N. H., Aug. 21, 1803; m. John McCusick of Denmark, Me. I cannot better describe the family than by extracts from a letter which I give below, written by their eldest daughter.

" My mother Kezia Pingree, was born in Hopkinton, N. H., Aug. 21, 1803 ; died in Denmark, Me., Nov. 3, 1863. She passed her entire life in Denmark, except the first months of her infancy, and a few terms at Fryeburg Academy. December, 1829, she married John McCusick, (my father) a farmer, an honest, upright man, possessed of strong, earnest piety. He deceased Dec. 1, 1873, aged 72. My mother had a good education combined with a vigorous constitution and great activity, which made her a very useful member of her father's large household, and a most kind unwearyed mother. She was a quiet, home-loving woman, which was evidently her chosen sphere ; though occasions of sickness and bereavement among relatives and neighbors brought her care, sympathy and watching. There were two things in which, as a mother, she excelled.

I. The help and direction too which she gave us in our early education. I, as the eldest child, felt its influence, perhaps, more than did my brothers, in consequence of the increasing cares of home. Up to the age of twelve, she was my daily teacher, when out of school. I commenced as many new books at home as at school. She drilled me in each and all the branches I studied. I think I commenced every branch under her tuition, and pursued Natural Philosophy and Astronomy wholly under her instruction. Indeed, the early habits of application I learned from my mother have helped me in a long course of teaching, more than aught else I have ever received.

II. Her unwearied care and watching when we were sick. Her virtues : tell them not upon the tomb! They loved the shade of her own quiet home. These still in memory's fond dream survive. The best of mothers ; the best of wives.

This letter is dated July 21, 1875.

"Our family consisted of 6 children : myself,

1. Roxana J. McCusick, aged 44 ; reside in Parkersburg, W. Va.; engaged for many years in teaching ; for some 9 years.

2. Rev. J. Frank McCusick, Parkersburg, W. Va. (Baptist.) He is a graduate of Waterville College, (now Colby University.) He is an energetic and active man, bringing his habits of close study and investigation down to the present. Age 39 ; m. ; has five daughters.

3 & 4. Benjamin F. and Ephraim, twins. Benjamin F. McCusick lives in Portland, Me., blacksmith. He is a Christian, giving close attention to business; an industrious, charitable citizen. He volunteered to serve in the army in the war. Age 37. He m. Catharine Elliott, at Portland in 1864. No children. They have an adopted daughter. Ephraim McCusick, twin, enlisted in 9th N. H. Infantry, Co. A. He was 24 years old; had not completed his education. In a letter home in June, 1862, he said, in announcing his intention to enter the army, "I do not do it, mother because I am bloodthirsty, but feel it a duty to respond to the call of my country."

He was the first of our family to volunteer. He was in the 9th army corps, which saw hard service in various fields; finally, in the siege before Petersburg, July 30, 1864, he was taken prisoner, and died in military prison at Danville, Va., Feb. 6, 1865, from the effects of long continued starvation. Age 27.

He possessed a well disciplined mind, good habits, was a Christian—member of the Baptist church. His officers spoke in commendable terms of his excellent life in the army; brave, patriotic and conscientious, always showed his Christianity by his manner of life, through all that time in camp, having prayer in his tent, whoever might be his companions. Not married.

5. Rev. Hazen Pingree McCusick of California, (Baptist,) 35 years old. Graduate of Waterville and Newton in 1869, has been a pastor in Illinois, but his health, always delicate, required him to change his home, first to the Rocky Mountains in Wyoming, afterwards to California where he finds a most healthful climate among the mountains. He has led a studious life. He was m. to Miss Flora McKinnon of Marysville, California, Dec. 25, 1873. No children. He was converted at the age of 16, pursued his entire academic and collegiate course with the ministry in view.

Rev. J. Frank McCusick of Parkersburg, W. Va., married Miss

Emma J. Robinson, Warren, Me., 1862. He was converted to God at the age of 21. His children are Linnie R. 12.

Hattie W. 8.
C. Robertie, 6.
Ella F. 4.
Irene Achsah, infant.

6. Asa A. McCusick, b. 1844. Entered the army at the age of 18, with his brother Ephraim, 9th N. H. Co. A., and perished of slow starvation in military prison at Salisbury N. C., Dec. 25, 1864. He did good service as a soldier, endured much hardship, which greatly impaired his health, so that in 1863 he came home on a furlough, and was at home when his mother died. He returned to his regiment, was taken prisoner in the battle of the Wilderness, May 12, 1864. He languished in military prison at Belle Isle, in Libby and in the stockade at Salisbury, N. C., where his strong ardent young life went out without a pillow or blanket under a Christmas sky, not quite 21 years old.

His last letter to us at home written from Libby prison, concluded with "I want to see you very much indeed, and hope I shall some day," which my heart echoes to say, I expect to see him in the Resurrection, for he was a Christian. He professed religion and was baptized at the age of 12 years.

Brother J. Frank McCusick, was first a soldier, a Lieut. in a Cavalry Regt. The last months of the war he was put on a Military Commissioner Court Martial, Alexandria, a post which he filled creditably. My father was a man of strong patriotism, and in his declining years gave his sons cheerfully to the country's call, though he was pained at their sufferings. He was a man of good habits, and blameless life, and by example and precept instilled the love for and practice of morality into the hearts of his children."

Miss McCusick's letter is so inspiring that I could not refrain from copying it.

From a St. Paul newspaper Nov. 8, 1875, by a Red Wing Correspondent.

Death of Hon. J. F. Pingrey. It is a sad task to chronicle at any time the death of a good man, but pre-eminently so when a man of the characteristics of this sketch.

Mr. Pingrey at the time of his death was 45 years of age, had been a resident of Red Wing and its immediate vicinity for twenty years, and in all these long years, as a man, citizen, officer and soldier, he sustained an unblemished character, and a reputation for honor and integrity that attaches to but few and is surpassed by none. Mr. Pingrey united with the M. E. Church of this city in 1864, and since that time he has given evidence that he was a sincere Christian by an exemplary life and a firm adherence to the principles of Christianity, as taught in the Bible. His religion was of no selfish character, but "to do good as he had opportunity," was a cardinal virtue with him. He was a man of large intelligence and sound principles; as a member of the board of county commissioners of this county he assisted very materially in bringing about reform in the financial matters of our county, so that county orders were at par and good for what they called for and has finally resulted in a merely nominal county tax. As superintendent of public schools, he gave entire satisfaction, and took a great interest in developing the best phases of our common school system.

As a member of the State Legislature he had the confidence of his constituents, and respect of his fellow members of the House of Representatives. As a Lieut. of the 6th Minnesota Infantry he has a stainless record and an honored name. He early identified himself with the order of Patrons of Husbandry, and has steadfastly been a staunch advocate of the principles of the order. Being naturally inclined to agriculture, he last year purchased and moved on to a farm in Wacouta, uniting with the Wacouta Grange of which he was a member at the time of his death, and which Grange is now one of the most flourishing in the state, and to which his decease will be a sad blow. The severity of his loss to his friends generally, and especially his family and relations cannot be measured by words; that they have the sympathies of the stricken community is evident from both words and actions of his entire acquaintance. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss. May the widow's God comfort and sustain them, and be a father to the fatherless. His death occurred on the morning of the 2nd inst. The disease, which rapidly did its work, was erysipelas.

From the Phrenological Journal for Nov. 1876.

Darius Harlan Pingrey was born in Andover, New York, April 23, 1841. He is the sixth of a family of seven children. His parents have a long-descended ancestry, and are now living in Andover on a farm. His father was thrown upon his own resources at early age of thirteen, and is regarded as a man of great energy and uprightness.

The subject of this sketch was brought up on the farm and knows what the agriculturist has to do. His parents, appreciative of mental culture, gave all their children a good English education. Darius, however, was thought worthy of a more extended training and for college, which he entered at seventeen. Though his father assisted him financially to prosecute his studies, yet he was obliged to do something toward completing the course, and so he taught school in the winter and worked on the farm during the summer vacations. While working on the farm he learned phonography at night, and, when teaching, he found time to pursue some of the studies in the course and to keep up with his class.

He was graduated in 1863, and soon after was invited to take charge of an academy in Pennsylvania, a position he filled to the satisfaction of all concerned. As no opening or field for advancement was presented by this position, he resigned it at the end of a year and went to a business college in Binghamton, New York. While in that city he became acquainted with the late Daniel S. Dickinson, who took a very warm interest in him and gave him the benefit of his powerful influence in various ways. On leaving the commercial institute, young Pingrey was called to the position of head teacher in a business college at Reading, Pennsylvania, and remained therein until appointed official reporter to the Pennsylvania Senate in 1866. This place he held but a short time, as Messrs. Bryant and Stratton offered him the place of Principal to their Harrisburg College under a local proprietor. While here he issued a book entitled "The Practical Calculator, designed for Business Men." This volume met with a ready sale and was much valued.

The finances of this college becoming somewhat deranged, the proprietor was obliged to sell his interest, and Mr. Pingrey then went to Washington, D. C., taking with him a testimonial signed by such men as Governor Curtin, Eli Slifer, then Secretary of State, and others. In Washington he found employment as reporter to the Senate. He went to work at the close of a Congressional term when the reporters had to labor sixteen hours a day, Sunday not excepted, to complete their transcripts of the proceedings. This strain soon told on his physical strength. The alternative was set before him by advisers: "Stimulate, or give up your situation." The teachings of his youth, the dictates of his conscience, and the promptings of reason said "Resign," and he did so at the sacrifice of a part of his salary. Then he traveled to the West, and reached Illinois in the early summer of 1867, where he was engaged as Principal of Farmington City schools. He taught in Illinois until last May. His reputation as a teacher stands high, and he is known also by his writings on educational subjects. His tact and talent in conducting a school is considered first-class. His rule is gentle, aiming to treat his pupils as ladies and gentlemen, and avoiding favoritism.

While teaching, he found much time to write for the press, and has written for some of the leading periodicals of the country, his subjects chiefly pertaining to departments of political economy. Some of his articles published in the Rural New Yorker and Prairie Farmer have attracted more than local attention. He has been a paid contributor to papers published in Salem, Oregon, Omaha, Minneapolis, Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia, and New York. An article of his appeared in the Chicago Inter-Ocean last winter, in which he stated that the public schools were not in danger so much from the Roman Catholics as from the politicians who try to make political capital in their relations to them.

In 1874, the late editor of the Phrenological Journal, to which he has been a contributor, in a note to Mr. Pingrey encouraged him to enter the field as a lecturer or public speaker. This suggestion gave him fresh inspiration, and he prepared a lecture on "American Institutions," and made his debut in 1875. His success has been much beyond the expectations of his friends. Some newspapers have characterized his lecture as a fine production, evincing much research 'and scholarly ability rarely equaled.' Last winter he organized a "Centennial Bureau of Correspondence," for the purpose of furnishing country papers letters from the Exposition. This undertaking was indorsed by the Chicago Times, Inter-Ocean, Springfield, (Mass.) Republican, and many other papers. He went to Philadelphia at the opening of the Exposition with a list numbering nearly fifty papers, representing ten states. His patrons generally speak in favorable terms of his letters, which are florid in style, and evince a good degree of graphic ability.

Mr. Pingrey was married in 1868 to Marion L. Harrington, daughter of the late M. G. Harrington of New York, formerly law-partner with E. W. Stoughton of New York. She died in 1873, of consumption, leaving one child of four years. She was a faithful and loving wife, a tender mother and Christian lady, ever earnest in benevolent works according to her opportunity.

STEPHEN PINGREE, son of Samuel Elliott P., and grandson of Job P., was born in Methuen, Mass., in 1751, and was married to Ruth Hoyt, Sept. 21, 1773. He was a soldier in the war of Independence and served under Washington at Long Island; he moved to Chester, N. H., where some of his children were born; his family consisted of one daughter and seven sons. In 1808, he with his whole family moved to Norway, Me., and was with his sons, settled in one neighborhood which they reclaimed from the wilderness. The father and sons were tall and sturdy men, and were all agriculturists, and three also were mechanics. He was a man of more than average ability and served the public in various responsible callings. He was a Whig in politics, and a Methodist of the early type. He and his wife both died at the age of 87 years.

HOYT PINGREE, son of Stephen Pingree, was born in Manchester, N. H., May 1789, and served a regular apprenticeship with a farmer, and in 1801 moved to Norway, and married Sarah Turner of Durham, Me. They were the parents of nine sons and three daughters; at a late period they moved to Waterford, Me., where he died in June, 1865, and she in 1876. Hoyt Pingree was a soldier in the war of 1812. Politically he was a Whig until the formation of the Republican party, when he became a Democrat. He was a man of strong religious tendencies; never a member of a church, but a believer at his death in the doctrines of the New Church. His wife was a Congregationalist.

LUTHER FARRAR PINGREE, grandson of Stephen Pingree of Methuen, Mass., and son of Hoyt Pingree of Norway, Maine, was born in Norway, Oxford Co., Me., May 25, 1813. He was until his majority, employed in agricultural pursuits and attending the common schools; he then served an apprenticeship as a machinist and pattern maker, and has gained honorable distinction as a first class mechanic and inventor, which is demonstrated by the numerous medals and diplomas received by him. Among the products of his skill may be enumerated steam engines and machinery, carriages, mills and machines for manufacturing lumber, and he is the patentee and manufacturer of artificial limbs, which have been pronounced by eminent surgeons as equal to, if not the best in the world. In this department of compensatory art he has distinguished himself and given excellent satisfaction. Although a great practical worker, he has been a constant student in the natural sciences, literature and music, which have been the pastimes and delights of his life. These tendencies have been largely manifested in his children.

From 1854 to 1861, Mr. P. was employed as a traveling general agent of the Union Manufacturing Co., and the Maine Association of the New Jerusalem Church, and the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society, and the American New Church Association.

Among the more public activities in which he has been interested, were the military, in which he faithfully served out four commissions, the last of which was as Aid-de-camp and orderly officer of the 6th Division, Maine Militia. He is a life member of the Maine Charitable Mechanic's Association, has been its Secretary and one of its Trustees, its Vice President, and its President two years. He is an Odd Fellow in both branches and a member of the Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment of Maine, has been Grand Marshal and Grand Senior Warden; has been a member of the Board of Managers of the Portland Provident Association, and also of the Widow's Wood Society, and teacher of Vocal Music in the Portland Fraternity, and also conductor of the musical service in the New Jerusalem Church, Portland; and is an honorary member of the Linonian Society of Yale College, which is one of the oldest Literary Societies in this country; with the exception of Secretary's salary in three bodies, these services have been rendered without compensation.

Morals and ethics and theology and the laws of life have been interesting matters which have claimed his attention from an early period. In theology he is a New Churchman or Swedenborgian and has been a member of its communion more than thirty years. Political economy has engrossed his attention at certain periods, and he has occasionally made his influence felt through the press, but he has never been a politician in any professional sense; has never held office except that of Coroner and Justice of the Peace and Qorum, although he has twice received the nomination for member of the Legislature, and twice as member of the City Council, and in every case ran ahead of his ticket, yet failed in consequence of belonging to a party that was in the minority. He has always been a Democratic Republican of the Jeffersonian and Jacksonian type, and during the late war was a war democrat. He was married to Elisabeth Marsh Dexter, daughter of Dea. David Dexter of Bath, Me., at the age of 28; they are the parents of nine children, as may be seen by the family record in this work. Mr. L. F. P. is tall and erect with light hair and blueish grey eyes, large and well proportioned without corpulence, possessed of great physical energy and endurance, a well balanced mind and average executive ability; is now 68 years of age, and feels a deep interest in the success of genealogy and history of the widely scattered family who are recognized by the name of Pingree.

Mr. L. F. Pingree, now of Ferry village, Cape Elizabeth, has been a resident of Portland, Me., thirty-five years. His children were educated in the public schools, and of his family one is a civil engineer and has been in the service of the city nine years, and is a graduate of the New York Homeopathic Medical College and is a practicing physician, one is a trunk maker and merchant, another a locomotive engineer, one a druggist's salesman, two music teachers, one of whom is a graduate of the Conservatory of Vocal Technique and physical development, her husband is a wholesale druggist, one a wholesale and retail dealer in ladies' furnishing goods, one a salesman and commercial traveler, and one a teacher of organ and piano, her husband is a ship master, the others are wives and mothers. All are in active, useful employments.

MRS. ELIZABETH M. D. PINGREE, wife of L. P. Pingree and daughter of Dea. David Dexter of Bath, Me. She was educated in the public schools of Bath and became a teacher at an early age. Although a domestic and good wife, and mother of a large family, to whom she has devoted the principal energies of her life, yet she has cultivated a taste for literature, art, and music, which have been the means of elevating the standard of education and culture in the Pingree Family.

Extract from the Journal by Ros. Hopkins, Clerk. Manuscript
Journal in Secretary of State's Office, page 382.

I think George Pengra was a son or grandson of Moses Pengry of the third generation, of whom I learn nothing after 1709.

- (865) JAMES PINGREY, was a soldier of the Revolution five years; was a blacksmith; after the close of the war moved to Lyme or Hanover, N. H., near the line of the towns. Was probably a brother or cousin of George Pengra (864.) His grand daughter living at Stowe, Vt., says her father James Pingrey, was born in Tolland, Conn. I have written the town clerk of Tolland, who has examined the records and does not find the name there. My uncle Stephen Pingrey, born in Rowley in 1759, told me in 1825, that he had understood there was a family of Pingrey's in Conn. but knew nothing of them.

(866) MOSES PENGRA was son of George, (864) b. at Bennington or Shaftsbury, Vt. As to the time of his birth or death I have no information. He was married and had children.

- (867) MARSHALL PENGRA, son of (864) George, was born in Shaftsbury, Vt., moved to Pennsylvania and died there some thirty years since. I saw at that time a biographical sketch of him in a newspaper, in which he was spoken of in favorable terms, as a useful citizen, and a Christian.
- (868) SYLVANUS PINGRY of Hanover, N. H., blacksmith, son of (865) James, of Hanover, N. H.; blacksmith.
- (869) JAMES PINGRY, son of (865) James, born in Tolland, Conn.; removed with his father to Lyme, N. H. and afterwards to Thetford, Vt.; was a blacksmith; m. Hannah Merrill of Plymouth, N. H.; lived awhile in Plymouth, removed to Norwich, Vt. He was in the army and the war of 1812; was wounded at Fort Erie. The last gun fired there sent a ball into his breast. It was taken out of his back, an ounce ball. He lived from fall till April 1815, when he died. He served through nearly the whole time of the war; was twice married.
- (870) JOHN PINGRY, son of James, (865) settled in Strafford, Vt.; m. Mary Alger of Strafford; was a member of the Freewill Baptist church. He went with all his family to Coshocton Co., Ohio, in 1817, afterwards to Portland, Indiana.

- (873) SARAH, sister of the above; m. D. Hovey of Lyme, N. H.; a farmer.
- (874) POLLY, sister of the above.

George Pengra (864) had three daughters of whom I know nothing further. His son, Moses, (866) had two sons, as follows:

- (876) T. C. PENGRA lives in Pennsylvania, (if living) is a clergyman of the Methodist denomination; was married.
- (877) OREN GEORGE PENGRA, b. April 24, 1806; m. Anne Pingrey, daughter of Joseph Pingry (48); d. at Jeffersonville, Indiana, Jan. 11, 1865. He was in the Union Army in the war of the Rebellion, and died in service. He was a farmer.

Died August 10, 1881, at the residence of John Miller, in Wallingford, Vt., Mrs. Eusebia Dickerman, widow of O. B. Dickerman, aged 86 years.

The deceased was the daughter of Nathaniel Pingrey, one of the early settlers of Mount Holly, in which she was born and where most of her life was passed. She married O. B. Dickerman in 1819, and they lived together for sixty years, he preceding her to the heavenly rest by nearly two years. They were both persons of great industry and prudence, and she proved to be the true helpmeet in all the years of active life. Most of those who were the companions of her early life have passed away, but many of her old friends and neighbors, as they read of her death, will be reminded of deeds of kindness and true neighborly love. She was one who delighted in giving where any service could be rendered to those who were in sickness or other need. Kind, thoughtful, judicious, she was much esteemed by those who came into the closest contact with her life and best knew its self-denying efforts. Some twelve years since she, with her companion, came to Wallingford to reside with her daughter, the wife of John Miller. For most of these years she has been a confirmed invalid, compelled to remain in repose from active labors in which she had always found delight. Patiently her daughter and family ministered to her every want, and all was done that could be to make her comfortable and render more endurable the enforced inactivity.

More than 50 years ago she united with the Baptist church in Mount Holly, and maintained that connection till her death. It was in the days of the pastorate of Rev. Daniel Packer that she made her public profession of religion, and for him she retained the warmest admiration. As a Christian Mrs. Dickerman was quiet and unostentatious, but faithful and humble.

The only surviving child is Mrs. Miller, above mentioned—a son having died nearly 12 years since. Two brothers, Darius Pingrey of Boston and Asahel Pingrey, residing in Iowa, are all that survive of 12 brothers and sisters. As one by one those of the older day are borne to their rest, there comes the reminder of how few of that generation remain, and of the many changes which come to our lives. May it be said of us, as it truthfully can be of Mrs. Dickerman, that she died in the hope of a blissful immortality.

Funeral services were held on Thursday afternoon, Rev. S. Henry Archibald officiating.

APPENDIX.

A LONG LIVED FAMILY.

The following is from a Newburyport paper, July 1881, relative to Hon. Solomon Foster, mentioned in No. 74.

Ex-Judge Solomon Foster to-day reached his 91st birthday in good health and with prospects of many years ahead of him. Judge Foster was born in Ipswich, Essex county, Massachusetts, on the 22d of July, 1790, and is the oldest of the four brothers and a sister living. Very early in life, he left home for Newburyport, where he remained for some time. In the spring of 1818 he came to Reading, where for 18 years he was engaged in the shoe business with a gentleman named O'Brien under the firm name of Foster & O'Brien. He then went to Philadelphia where he carried on the shoe and other business for eight years. In the meantime, in 1840, he had come to Pottsville, and erected the building No. 20 South Centre street, Pottsville. About 1845 and 1846 he came here and located permanently and until five or six years ago was engaged in the shoe business. In the year 1840, when the Court House agitation was in progress he was appointed upon the committee of citizens to prosecute the work. In order to get this made a county town the people of Pottsville had to erect the Court House building; subscriptions were taken up and handled by the committee mentioned, which made Judge Foster paymaster and superintendent. In 1849 he was appointed Associate Judge of the county, and the following year was elected for a term of five years. Since 1748 he has been an elder in the First Presbyterian church, but long before that date was an influential member of it. His faculties remain unimpaired and his recollection of the events of over half a century ago are vivid. He has an elastic step, enjoys a good appetite, and regularly attends to his business. Mr. Foster was never married. The long, honored and useful life he has led in this community entitles him to the respect and esteem in which he has been held by everybody, and all will join the Ohronicle in hoping that he may at least attain his centenary to which he is so rapidly progressing.—Pottsville, Penn., Chronicle, July 22, 1881.

Judge Foster is the oldest of a family of five, three of whom reside in this city, their names and ages being as follows: Milicent, 86; Nathaniel, 84; Thomas, 82. Two brothers reside in Pottsville, Solomon, the one referred to, aged 91; and Jesse, aged 89. This is one of the most remarkable records which can be found of any family in the country; four brothers and a sister, the youngest of whom is 82 years old is hard to beat.

and other places, thereby reducing the population of the town.

OLD AND NEW STYLE.

- Page 406. The manner of writing dates when this country was first settled was by numbering the months. This practice prevailed in Rowley until about the year 1660. March was the first month and February the twelfth. The 25th of March being Lady day or Annunciation of the church, was the first day of the year. After numbering the months was discontinued, still the year commenced with the 25th of March and so continued until 1752. From this cause arose the custom of indicating the change by the use double dates, between the first of January and the 25th of March in each year.

GENEALOGICAL HISTORY OF THE
ANDREW PINGREE FAMILY,
BY
DANIEL PINGREE, M. D.,
OF
PINGREE GROVE, KANE CO., ILLINOIS.
JULY 27, 1880.

ANDREW PINGREE (my father) was born in Rowley, Mass., Feb. 17, 1775. Died March 25, 1846. In early manhood he followed the boot and shoe manufacturing business in some town not far from the place of his birth and was foreman of quite a large amount of business. He was leader of a choir in an orthodox church where he lived, delighting very much in not only vocal but instrumental music. He was not a bigot in his religious views, but in early life was inclined to think there must be a hell for the desperately wicked. Was not a very regular attendant at church, but spent his Sundays at home, reading his Bible and singing, resting from all the usual labors of the week. One year, within my recollection, (perhaps rather as a joke, as he seldom attended church,) he was elected Tithingman, and attended at the post of duty every Sunday during the year. Never before were the unruly boys so strictly subjected to the rules of New England "blue laws." Once, only, in the course of his official term and duty did a smile break the dignity of his countenance. An unruly boy, full of fun and the devil, seating himself in church beside his dignity, pulled a large knife and a plug of tobacco from his pocket and politely offered them to the peace officer of the day, who never used the poison. The act was done so deliberately and with such apparent kindness, that the courtesy was acknowledged with an "unwilling smile!"

He married Abiah Straw (my mother) of Weare, N. H., about the year 1802, lived in Weare, Springfield, Grantham, and Meriden in Plainfield, N. H. Removed to Kane Co., Illinois, in October, 1838, with his family. The place is now called Pingree Grove. Farming was mainly his business here. He was industrious, economical, temperate and strictly honest. Was a democrat all his life and died a Universalist, the 25th of March, 1846; was buried at Udina, near his home. Age 79.

Abiah Straw, who became his wife, (my mother) was born in the town of Weare, N. H., Aug. 8, 1786. Her father's Christian name was Israel and her mother's maiden name was Abiah Nelson. Some of the relatives live in that vicinity now, of whom I know but little. She was a Universalist and one of the best of women. Died Sept. 28, 1846, aged 58 years and was buried at Udina. She was the mother of ten children, named as follows, viz: Andrew, Straw, Abiah, Francis, Betsey, (died young) Sally, Emily, Daniel, Betsey Noyse, and William Cutler. The above is the order of the births in which I will write of them.

REV. ANDREW PINGREE (my brother) was born in Weare, N. H., July 18, 1803. Soon after removed to Springfield and the other towns named, with his parents. Learned the clothier's trade at about 21 years of age and also commenced teaching winter public schools about the same time. Continued to teach winters and follow his trade and attend school at Kimball Union Academy at Meriden, N. H., till the spring of 1827, when he removed to Hingham, Mass. For a number of years he continued to teach, sometimes all the year, at other times only winters, spending the balance of his time clerking in mercantile houses, &c., and studying for the Universalist ministry with Rev. A. A. Folsom of Hingham, Mass., until about the year 1834 or 5; having up to this time taught school in a number of the towns of the vicinity of Hingham, and although he was quite successful in all his undertakings, he was particularly so in North Scituate, for there he became acquainted with the one who afterwards became his wife.

About 1834, he commenced preaching the Gospel and soon removed to Belfast, Maine, and in connection with preaching every Sabbath two or three times, he taught a High School in Belfast and also in Castine, Me., for a number of years, having in Oct. 1838 visited Kane Co., Ill., and located some land which he continued to own during his lifetime. On his return from Illinois to Maine he continued to preach and teach till the fall of 1843, when, not forgetting the attachment he formed in North Scituate, Plymouth Co., Mass., he returned to the object of mutual attraction and on Jan. 1, 1844, married Miss Hannah M. Curtis. Remained in Scituate until Sept. 1, 1846, and removed to Pingree Grove, Kane Co., Ill., with his wife, and ever after made that his permanent home. He preached and taught school one year in St. Charles, Kane Co., Ill., and continued to preach till press of other business made it necessary to retire mainly from the duties of the ministry, except on funeral occasions and celebrating marriages.

During the balance of his life he filled many important positions which, in addition to his own affairs, made his mental and physical exertions very laborious. He became the owner of 1200 or 1500 acres of land and considerable other property. Was elected, and several times re-elected County Surveyor, and did surveying in every town and village in the county, was for 18 years a member of the Co. Board of Supervisors, was appointed by the Probate Court Special Commissioner to settle many different estates; executor, administrator, guardian, &c., on some thirty cases; was Postmaster many years, Notary Public, &c., &c. He held the position of trustee of the Lombard University at Galesburg,, Knox Co., Ill., a Universalist College, for many years to which he was very much devoted and aided it by many valuable donations. He was a life long democrat and Universalist and much respected for his honesty and ability. His labors continued to the end of life, and he died at his residence in Pingree Grove, on the 18th of August, 1879, aged 76 years. Was buried at Udina. (P. O. Pingree Grove, Kane Co., Ill.

Miss Hannah M. Curtis who became his wife, was born April 12, 1811, in North Scituate, Plymouth Co., Mass., was the daughter of Aminiel Curtis, Esq., of the same place. She is a good scholar, having had unusual facilities for acquiring an education at Lombard University. She is much beloved by her associates, but it remained to the good fortune of Leverett M. H., and followed farming till the spring of 1838, when he removed to Pingree Grove, Kane Co., Ill., bought land and followed farming. He was a democrat and Universalist. He married, April 18, 1844, Harriet Thurston, who was born in Zanesville, Ohio, Dec. 6, 1821, and now (1880) lives at Pingree Grove, Ill., on the homestead established by her husband. Universalist. William Henry Adams, born July 1, 1871.

FRANCIS PINGREE, Esq., (my brother) of Kier, Buchanan Co. Iowa, was born in Springfield, N. H., Feb. 13, 1809, lived mainly with his parents to the age of maturity, having acquired a substantial common school education and procured a legal certificate for teaching. Soon after arriving of age he went to Danvers, Mass., and a spent a few months at manual labor.

Having a great desire to "go to sea" and to visit different countries, he enlisted on board the whale ship Averic, Capt. Swain master, for a three years' voyage, and sailed Nov. 26, 1831, from New Bedford, for the purpose of cruising for whales in Pacific Ocean, with nineteen missionaries on board, ten men and nine women, destined for the Sandwich Islands.

After spending about six years in a rough, sea-faring life, catching whales, and on merchant vessels and visiting many different places, spending about six months in different ports in China and "seeing the elephant" generally, he returned to Plainfield, N. H., (Meriden P. O.) the residence of his parents, Nov. 7, 1837. Remained at home during the winter, in which time the whole Pingree family formed a plan of removing to Illinois.

In April 1838, in company with his brother Straw, started for the "far west" and located at Pingree Grove, then a wolf-howling wilderness of oak openings and prairie, a place then without a name and not more than two or three residences within eight miles. Elgin was then the nearest post office, eight miles distant, with perhaps twenty-five inhabitants and now has a population of over 8000. He and brother S. settled and went to farming. Married, June 18, 1843, to Miss Lydia Barney Patchin, aged 16 years, daughter of Charles and Laura Patchin, who removed from Illinois to Ohio. Both her parents were Americans and her father is now living in Hampshire, Kane Co., Ill.

Filled the office of Justice of the Peace four years satisfactorily to his constituents and remained on the farm at Pingree Grove till the spring of 1853, when he removed with his family to Kier, Buchanan Co., Iowa, and bought 160 acres of land and continued to carry on farming.

LYDIA B. PINGREE, his wife, died on the 6th of November, 1853, aged about 26 years, and was buried in the neighborhood of the farm. She was a Universalist.

On March 21, 1854, married his second wife, Mrs. Melissa Hall, from Ohio, aged 40 years, being her third husband. Her maiden name was Thurston. Her parents are dead. He was a firm Universalist, an unwavering democrat and a much respected, honest man. Died Feb. 2, 1879, and was buried at Littleton, Buchanan Co., Iowa.

Had no children by the second wife, who now lives on the farm at Kier, Iowa. By the first wife he had five children, named as follows, viz: Melissa Adel, Don Francisco, Laura Abiah, Francis Eugene and Betsey Nelson. All born at Pingree Grove, Kane Co., Ill.

MELISSA ADEL PINGREE, was born at Pingree Grove, Ill., May 9, 1844. Married July 4, 1861, in Grant Co., Wis., to Manley J. Zimmerman of German descent, born in Pickaway Co., Ohio, Oct. 28, 1829.
